Gulani fits surgeries to the patients

Dr. Arun Gulani, founding director of the Gulani Vision Institute, believes anyone can have better than 20/20 vision.

“Most doctors do cookie-cutter surgery; they fit the patient to the only surgery they know,” he said. “There are more than 48 vision correction techniques. We design our surgeries for each person.”

Gulani is known nationally and internationally as a leading expert in the field of corneal and refractive surgery and regularly teaches and shares his clinical and surgical techniques with other surgeons. He said he strives to provide each of his patients with the highest quality of care with a “high tech/high touch” approach.

In an email statement, George H. Hodges Jr., a private investor and owner of Hodges Blvd. Development Group and Glen Kernan Country Club, said, “I have never had such a pleasant, informative, personable, professional and rewarding experience as the one I had with Dr. Gulani. He performed cataract surgery on my right eye and Lasik surgery on my left eye and also did cataract surgery on both [my wife] Kernan’s eyes. We could not be more pleased with the results. He is an absolute credit to the medical profession.

“The city of Jacksonville is fortunate beyond words to have this world-renowned surgeon in the community. He should be publicly acknowledged [and] thanked for the service he unselfishly performs for not only the residents here but the tremendous number of people who travel to Jacksonville from all over the world and this country for his excellent medical attention.”
